Inculcating quality culture and institutionalization of best practices are given much importance in routine practices. IQAC evolves different mechanisms to sustain quality in all spheres of learning. It sets benchmarks in the beginning of the academic year to achieve the goals of quality enhancement. It serves as a bridge between all the stakeholders of the institution.

About the Seminar

Higher education plays a significant role in the overall development and growth of a nation. Keeping in view the importance of Higher Education in the growth of economy, we as the nation, have increased the number of Universities, Colleges, Research Centres, Teachers, Infrastructure, Supportive Services and Learning Materials etc. But, the increase in all these aspects has not yielded the expected result. Mushrooming of low quality educational institutions is equally responsible for declining quality of education in our country. Poor quality of higher education can also be attributed to various factors like lack of favourable environment for teaching and learning, lack of infrastructure, wide gap between teacher and student ratio, defective and outdated curriculum, lack of effective feedback, monitoring etc. Kothari Education Commission (1964-66) also stated that unscrupulous rapid expansion in educational institutions has resulted in lower quality.

These unexpected regressive changes in Higher Education warranted all the stakeholders to initiate some measures for improving quality which is most essential for the growth of the economy of our country. This is how quality education has become the mantra of present day education in India. In this context, there is a need to change the policies of education and evolve new strategies which can suit to the present society. It is essential to build value based, knowledge and employability skill based, culture based peaceful society which can lead the country towards total progress.

Hence, vigorous efforts need to be made to improve the quality of Higher Education in India and to cater to the changing needs. As a part of it, an effort is already made at the College level by establishing IQAC. In this backdrop, the present seminar focuses its attention on the issue of quality concerns in Indian Higher Education and factors influencing the quality of education and the role of IQAC in evaluating, promoting, monitoring quality process at College level. In this context, papers are invited on the following sub theme:
